i never finished my diary entry from yesterday as keff came to visit me at lamplighter. what did i leave out/not get to write? right now i'm sitting outside for dog with chris, er, we're in outdoor seating.

she said she really could not conceive ever choosing anything/any one over her career. because once you do that, you're placing all of your happiness and all of you into someone else's hands in someone else's hands. i realized how i thought it was interesting - our roles/perceptions had reversed, or at least i was like the way she is now for much of our relationship but now i wouldn't necessarily say i wouldn't choose my career over someone, but it would be a very difficult decision for me/a difficult choice.
